This is you. Almost a month ago. Where is the praise for the Trump administrations social distancing guidelines that have us nowhere near this number?

Pathetic.

Brief list of attributes to look for in leaders:

-Belief in science.
-Willingness to ask, again and again, "How might I be wrong?" and change mind when necessary.
-Love, compassion and emotion over fear, fake-toughness, and machismo.
-Defer to experts.
-Kindness.

We have slowed the infection rate so that every 10 people infect about 9 people.

That means that the outbreak is slowing, not growing.

But it leaves very little room for error.

We need the bring the infection rate down even more in order to safely reopen the economy.

You know what defeats the hatefulness of Trumpism? The largest electoral margin defeat since Goldwater. That is what he deserves. A humiliating, historic landslide loss. And that is actually possible.But it takes a bigger coalition than your twitter bubble. Build the army.

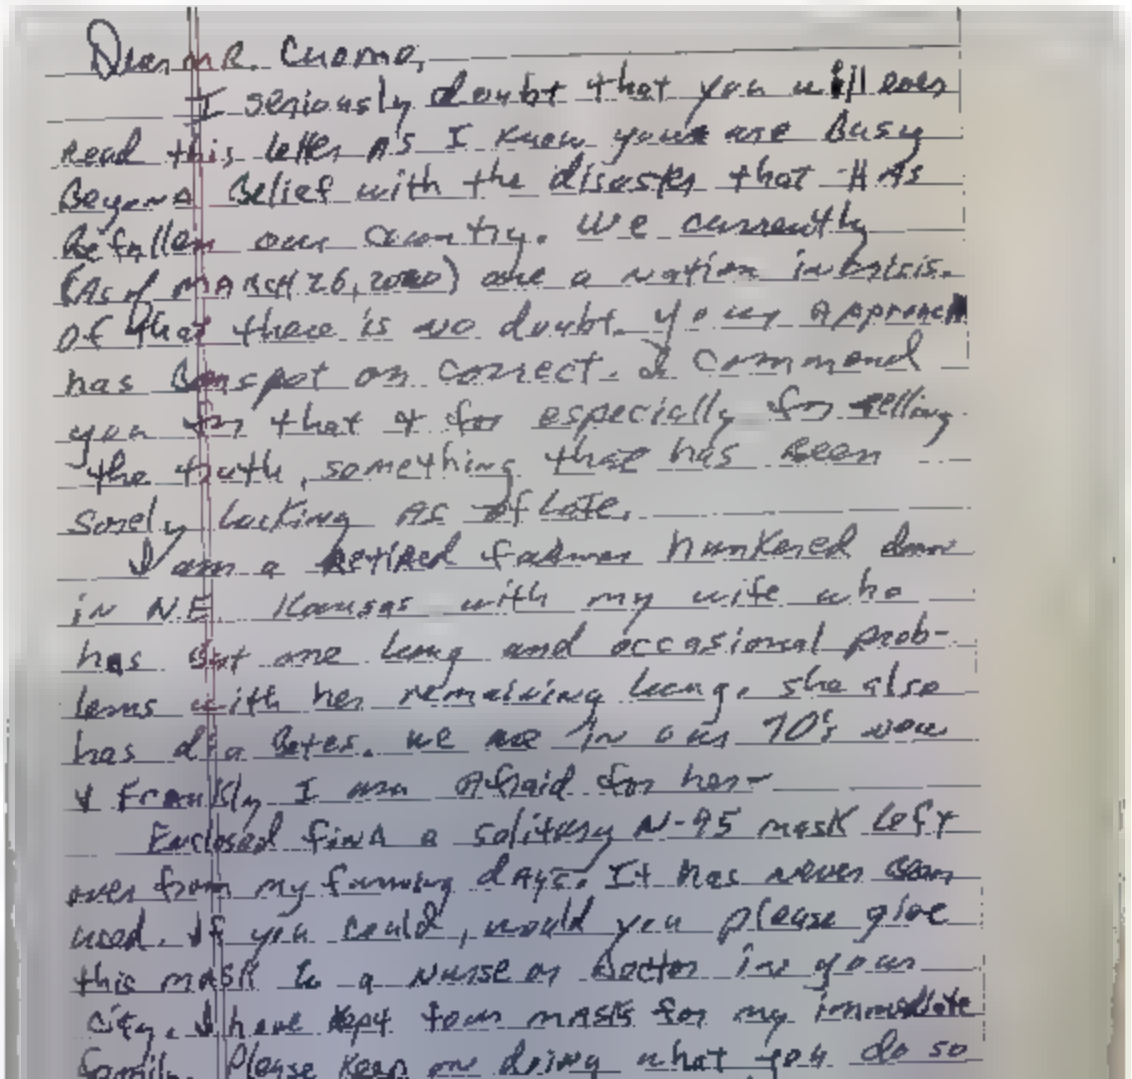
I received this letter from a farmer in northeast Kansas. His wife is ill and he is aging.

He sent me 1 of 5 N95 masks he has from farming to pass on to a doctor or nurse in New York.

This is humanity at its best. I share his letter as inspiration.



Dear Mr. Cuomo,
I seriously doubt that you will ever read this letter as I know you are busy beyond belief with the disaster that has befallen our country. We currently (As of March 26, 2020) are a nation in crisis. Of that there is no doubt. Your approach has been spot on correct. I commend you for that & for especially for telling the truth, something that has been sorely lacking as of late.
I am a retired farmer hunkered down in N.E. Kansas with my wife who has but one lung and occasional problems with her remaining lung. She also has diabetes. We are in our 70's now & Frankly I am afraid for her.
Enclosed find a solitary N-95 mask left over from my farming days. It has never been used. If you could, would you please give this mask to a nurse or doctor in your city. I have kept four masks for my immediate family. Please keep on doing what you do so

2) Bottomline: RAPID TESTING + RAPID CONTACT TRACING + QUARANTINE is the three step approach to containment and breaking the transmission chain. But it needs to be done in rapid succession. Or else if tracing too slow, we won't be able to stop the H2H transmission. #COVID19

This is the genius of the Trumpers - things the states did well like mitigation, work great (but they won't get all their red state governors to do it). And even though Trump undermines mitigation, he should get credit for any lives saved. Utter ridiculous BS

WSJ reports that in late February, Trump threatened to fire Nancy Messonnier, CDC's chief of respiratory diseases, after she told reporters the truth about the spread of the virus. on.wsj.com/2yAd0r4

> On Feb. 25, Nancy Messonnier, a CDC official, said the agency was preparing for a potential pandemic and that community spread of the virus was likely. The stock market plunged.
> At a media briefing later that day, Mr. Azar sought to quell concerns, saying the virus was "contained."

Yep. WSJ deserves some kind of stealth award for framing this piece as "Azar blew it"—exactly how WH would want it—and then slipping this in.

I checked WP and NYT versions to see if they reported this. They reported the outburst, but not the part about threatening to remove her.

Trump filled up the Strategic Petroleum Reserve a month ago with oil at $30 a barrel.

Right now, it's going for -$10 a barrel.

Another brilliant move by our dealmaker-in-chief.

Now would be a good time to ask why we have a petroleum reserve but not a PPE reserve? A hazmat reserve? A ventilator reserve?

Why does the government feel that oil is a singular threat to our economy?

There needs to be a national strategy for:

1. Testing
2. Tracing prior contacts of infected carriers
3. Isolating prior contacts until test results known
4. Quarantining confirmed cases

Across the entire country.

Which will require 1 MM tests a day.

That NYT story was faulty. Here's why: News viewership is up because of the crisis, not because of Trump briefings. On Friday 8 million people were watching Fox/CNN/MS an hour before the briefing. During briefing? 9 mil. After? 9.5 mil. See, most would've been watching regardless

Also interesting @harvardiop finding: 2/3rds of young Americans disapprove of Trump's job performance.

Only 15% of young Americans say Trump has made their lives better. Among young REPUBLICANS, not even half say that Trump has made their lives better.

Overall, 15% of young Americans indicate that as a result of President Trump, their lives are better, 29% believe they are worse. 39% responded no different, 16% were unsure. Across most demographic subgroups such as gender, race/ethnicity, education, and community type, more said their lives were worse than better under President Trump's leadership. Nearly half of Republicans (46%) say their lives are better, 7% worse, 39% no different. For Democrats: 4% better, 46% worse; Independents: 9% better, 23% worse.

The United States and South Korea had their first positive Covid19 cases on roughly the same day. South Korea did mass testing from the beginning and contact tracing and has had 236 deaths. The Trump Administration bungled testing for months and we now have over 49,000 deaths.

Defending Trump as he bungles the response to a virus that kills thousands of Americans daily is many things but it is not patriotic. Try caring more about the lives of your fellow Americans than your politics.

You're correct, @JoeBiden. Although UV-C light does kill germs, bacteria & viruses on exposed surfaces, it can also cause painful burns on the skin, can damage the cornea if observed directly, and is a known carcinogen for human skin. UV light CANNOT be used to treat coronavirus.

The thing Democrats seem to have won in this round of negotiations was a national testing program, which the administration did not want, because it would require Trump to take responsibility rather than foist it on to governors.

> Michael Grunwald @MikeGrunwald

It...sucks that was the get. In a normal administration, both sides would want testing.

But that's the level of negligence Democrats are confronting on the other side. All the GOP wanted to do was top off PPP, which wasn't even sufficient to help small biz.

Also, a narrow point: The $25 billion Dems got for testing is also meant to fund contact tracing.

The main limitation of the French approach is that the official French list of tax havens is way too restrictive.

It excludes the key European tax havens (Luxembourg, Netherlands, Ireland) towards which the bulk of profit shifting takes place

See: missingprofits.world

Gabriel Zucman @gabriel_zucman · Apr 23
The other problem is that the exclusion was initially much broader: it initially applied to all firms with affiliates in tax havens

Then the measure was watered down, and now only applies to firms with "empty shells" in tax havens (with no clear definition of what that means)

What does being a person of color have to do with this? Biden is the only thing stopping a Trump re-election. Crapping on him - here wrongly - helps Trump. Your tweets expose that you're more comfortable doing that than critiquing the media. And POC overwhelmingly support Biden.

White women lashing out at POC when most of them voted for Trump is a pretty classic dodge for them not actually holding each other accountable. They didn't vote for von because of my tweets saying Biden's camp should do better, they did it because they support white supremacy.

> But as long as the economy was decent and many of the crises Trump created were far away, the immediate costs of Trump's narcissistic governance have been, for most citizens, more psychic than material. That changed with the coronavirus. Today the lies are no longer about the size of the audience at Trump's inauguration, the fruits of sucking up to North Korea or the findings of Robert Mueller's special counsel investigation. Now the bill for a president with a tyrant's contempt for truth and competence has come due.

When I announced my campaign one year ago today, I said we were in a battle for the soul of the nation.

One year later, that is as true as it has ever been. I believe we can and we will emerge from this crisis a stronger, better, and fairer nation. Together, as one America.

Mayor Pete's early skyrocketing profile was e almost entirely a function of Lis Smith putting him in front of every journo who'd take him. Biden might not need to do that but he needs to be more visible than he is. And he does not have a platform access problem.

If the Fed chooses to provide trillions in taxpayer-backed loans to big companies without promptly disclosing who those companies are and what deal they got, the Fed's credibility will not recover.

The public deserves to know what's happening with its money.

You can read my full letter to the Fed from last week here. The Fed is likely to decide what to disclose in the coming days. Remember: this is your money.

April 15, 2020

The Honorable Jerome H. Powell
Chairman
Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System
20th Street and Constitution Avenue N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20551

Dear Chairman Powell:

The Federal Reserve has already established plans for more than $2 trillion in emergency lending, with probably trillions more to come. Yet it has not announced what information it will publicly release about individual transactions with private companies through taxpayer-backed lending facilities – including whether it will even release the names of individual beneficiaries.

I write to respectfully request that the Federal Reserve publicly release detailed and timely information about each individual transaction. The public deserves to know which companies are receiving taxpayer-backed lending through the Fed and on what terms, and to be able to consider what those companies do after receiving taxpayer support.

As you know, Section 4003 of the Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security Act ("CARES Act") authorizes the Treasury Secretary to "make loans, loan guarantees, and other investments to support eligible businesses, States, and municipalities that do not, in the aggregate, exceed $500,000,000,000." The Treasury can use as much as $100 billion "to make loans and loan guarantees to, and other investments in programs or facilities established by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System for the purpose of providing liquidity to the financial system that supports lending to eligible businesses, States, or municipalities."

The $100 billion from the CARES Act supplements billions in taxpayer money that was already at the Treasury Department's disposal in the Exchange Stabilization Fund

This all comes as the total amount of people hospitalized continues to decline.

NY still has about 5K new cases per day. I doubt they're identifying 20% of actual new positives, which if true would mean at least 25K catch it every day. It sounds reasonable to me that 5% of those wind up in hospital.

Thank you for citing National Review. Now let me give you some facts. The IMHE model you cite does not seem to fully account for the long tail of deaths the US, Italy and Spain have so far seen. So this model seems a little optimistic.

More important, this model assumes existing policy. If Trump had, say, tested early and worked to certain the virus in February as S Korea did, this model would then show tens of thousands fewer deaths. So, as much as you try to obfuscate-Trump's mishandling has led to more death

Yes, our testing capacity is growing, which is good. But unfortunately we were so slow to react that our outbreak is now the biggest in the world. So we need vastly more testing capacity than we have now. Also contract-tracing and isolation-quarantine plans. Where are those?

"It has gone from being a low hum to a rumble," said Susan Swecker, the chairwoman of Virginia's Democratic Party.

Howard Wolfson, who spent months immersed in Democratic polling and focus groups on behalf of former Mayor Michael R. Bloomberg of New York, had a blunt message for Sanders skeptics: "People underestimate the possibility of him becoming the nominee at their own peril."

The discussion about Mr. Sanders has to date been largely confined to private settings because — like establishment Republicans in 2016 — Democrats are uneasy about elevating him or alienating his supporters.

An earlier letter (which I also signed) was circulated by Todd and sent to Fox. theguardian.com/commentisfree/… In my view, letters like this appeal to a common set of standards. Fox News has its own standards. They are not the same as those that prevail at ABC, CBS, NBC, MSNBC and CNN.

This is right. #Trump has somewhere between 25% to 35% (depending on how you analyze the numbers) with him no matter what. Partisanship alone probably gets him to 40%. But if he loses by, say, 58-42, it's a landslide that costs the GOP the Senate. Watch swing voters, not his base

I just need to say this:

I worked with @HillaryClinton on public policy or two decades.

I Know that if she was President, she would have ordered mass testing in January, stayed on it, devised a plan to contain the virus like S Korea, and countless lives would've been saved.

Absolutely time to marginalize Trump. That will drive him crazy. Also time to put him on the defensive. He wants to make China the focus -time to remind people continually of all the praise he gave Xi Jinping for his handling of Covid. Don't let him change the narrative.

One thing I show is that racial disparities exist in rural areas as much as they do in large cities. African Americans in the South (green line) are getting hit hard and experiencing more deaths than other rural residents.

This is huge- upholding risk corridor payments could have a substantial impact on insurers' willingness to enter/remain in marketplaces.

The Supreme Court has ruled that the federal government owes insurers $12 billion in unpaid Affordable Care Act "risk corridor" payments.

Strong disagree. Only relevant policy impact is on credibility of future COVID19 risk corridors (if passed).

ACA insurers had written these funds off a long time ago, so it will be a windfall with potential MLR consequences.

Could have implications for CSR though

ROK also has a much higher population density than the US (including Seoul>NYC)... making the fact that they have such a low mortality rate is even more striking. In general, Asian countries have managed this far better than most Western countries.

I've been learning about the Flu of 1918 (which came from Kansas not Spain), which killed 500,000 Americans. They had all kinds of quacks then pushing "cures" but none of their quacks were the President of the United States. It's amazing how we went backwards a 100 years on that

It's all theories as to where it came from. Some think it was brought by Chinese labourers on the Western Front. I favour the British camp at Etaples, where they was a massive pig farm and a transit camp with 100,000 troops at any one time moving to and from the frontlines.

By far the most recurring utterances from Mr. Trump in the briefings are self-congratulations, roughly 600 of them, which are often predicated on exaggerations and falsehoods.

Biden's plan with the "public option" wants to keep copays, deductibles, in and out of network fees. Something nonexistant in MFA. Please tell me how much you love these fees.

Medicare was always meant to have the age of eligibility reduced. Many people want it reduced to 50.

People can hold more than one politician accountable at a time. If dissenting at Biden causes him to move left, it would allow more progressives to be excited to vote in Nov, instead of trying to shame progressives, perhaps understand this. Policy is life or death for many ppl.

BREAKING: The Supreme Court just ruled that @MarcoRubio & Congress were wrong to prohibit the Obama Admin from paying risk corridors to reduce premiums in the ACA in the early years.

Congress did anyway, causing insurers to leave & raise rates. This should never have happened.

I wish people understood that it was the Republicans who messed the ACA up. I don't understand WHY they don't want everyone to have health insurance!!!! It will cost less in the long run if we all have health ins.

They definitely broke it and it has fed their narrative to this day because of the #GOPTaxScam. That and the removal of the mandate broke what was working.

#M4A would be cheaper and better for everyone but hospitals and insurance companies make a "killing" so... 🤦

It's all theories as to where it came from. Some think it was brought by Chinese labourers on the Western Front. I favour the British camp at Etaples, where they was a massive pig farm and a transit camp with 100,000 troops at any one time moving to and from the frontlines.

I favour it because there's good evidence on Etaples as one of the sources based on the UKs top influenza expert, Professor Oxford. Also that the piggery at Etaples kept large amounts of chickens. Humans, pigs and chickens, with the influenza virus swapping genes.

The closely watched IHME model, which makes estimates on scope and resource utilization as a result of covid, has updated once again and shows a slight worsening for the U.S. The state that shows perhaps the greatest worsening of their epidemic under the updated model is Georgia.

This graphic shows how the cumulative number of estimated U.S. covid deaths projected by the model have changed through the various updates. The latest 4/27 update to the model shows another increase in the projection for median cumulative deaths to 74,073.

Repubs claim that big government is evil. So why do they run for congress? For power. Get that, & it's easy to see why they fight stimulus bills when a Dem is POTUS, but they rush to throw enough money into the economy keep a Repub president from taking the blame for a recession.

1 million confirmed. Given the rationing of testing, it's not out of bounds to surmise that the actual # of #coronavirus cases is several times that 1 million.

Without post mortem screening for #COVID—19, it's also likely that the figure of approx. 55K dead now is also higher.

1 6 27

Joel @thejotho · Apr 29

Spot on.

Logically it would be impossible for the number of cases to be only 1 million. There must be many more walking around undiagnosed and/or not showing symptoms and infecting others. And various states are opening up again! Scary.

💯% Most cities are just waiting for the fed to bail them out. Nashville has proposed a 32% property tax increase ($750/year for owners of a $300K home) to cover an estimated $200M revenue drop. If Washington doesn't come through, you will see similar, or devastating cuts.

Has anyone called on Donald Trump to release complete records of all of his businesses in hopes that doing show might shed some light on the dozen or so sexual assault allegations against him?

Lots of people are pretending to believe this is a standard they hold politicians to.

According to Reade she did not file a complaint that included the assault allegation, so searching through Biden's records to not find any such complaint wouldn't debunk her story — but it's a fun chance to go fishing.

NEWS:

@JoeBiden calls on the Secretary of the Senate to conduct a full search for Tara Reade's complaint and release it if it exists, and also to release "any and all other documents in the records that relate to the allegation":

Dear Secretary Adams,

I am writing to request your assistance in determining whether 27 years ago a staff member in my United States Senate office filed a complaint alleging sexual harassment. According to public reports, the staff member, Ms. Tara Reade, has stated that in 1993 she filed such a complaint with the office responsible for enforcing Senate employees' rights in the workplace.

We had understood that the Senate stores records from this office, and from this period, in the National Archives. The Archives now states that the records would have remained under the control of the Senate.

Accordingly, I request that you take or direct whatever steps are necessary to establish the location of the records of this Office, and once they have been located, to direct a search for the alleged complaint and to make public the results of this search. I would ask that the public release include not only a complaint if one exists, but any and all other documents in the records that relate to the allegation.

Sincerely,

Joseph R. Biden, Jr.

The very serious problems in France, Sweden, and the UK do I think demonstrate that the issue is more complicated than "Trump screwed up."

But in general "Trump is causing American outcomes to converge with infamously dysfunctional Spain & Italy" is not a strong recommendation.

If you have been told repeatedly that "believe women" means listen to women, take their claims seriously and investigate their claims and you continue to pretend that it means accept whatever women say without question, YOU ARE ACTING IN BAD FAITH.

I can understand how it might be confusing, and perhaps there could have been a clearer slogan for #metoo but the point is that prior to #metoo people did not approach accusations from women with that standard. Hence, "believe women" as a slogan.

In the countries w/ the best outcomes—e.g. South Korea—contact-tracing involves invasive e-monitoring. I'm not aware that any other approach has proven successful against COVID-19. How can that transpire in the US when it seems antithetical to American freedoms & civil liberties?

For Democrats who worry that this situation is a means by which the hard left can relitigate a primary in which their preferred candidate lost, and thereby supplant the will of the voters, a Bruenig column like this is not going to be reassuring.

So we get a clickbait headline of "headaches" for campaigns. But just remember how the media, including Politico handled emails stolen by a foreign country - breathless coverage, almost always out of context, covering gossip instead of facts or policy. They want to do it again.

The Biden campaign needs to lay out the data and show exactly how Trump's six weeks of dithering caused all of the deaths, job losses, and GDP loss. That's the case against Trump; an unfit President who doesn't act if there's nothing in it for him.

Anti-anti-Trump takes on Covid are mostly ignoring the sheer scale we're working with here — say a more competent response had reduced the death toll by 5%?

Echoing @neeratanden. I helped close up Obama's Senate office in '09. Personnel records kept in a Senate office are destroyed before papers are donated somewhere. Before reporters jump to conclusions, check with people with first-hand information. I did. It wasn't hard to do.

This is really important -- many states are moving up in cases. And no state has the infrastructure in place to contain the virus. State borders don't matter to this virus so some states mismanaging this will affect us all.

Christine O'Donnell says this might have occurred another year now, says specifically 2007. Though it's unclear to me if Biden attended this year either. His calendar on his campaign website on the Web Archive and it indicate he was in Iowa this whole day.

> Asked on Sunday about the organizer's statement that Biden never attended that year, O'Donnell stood by the accusation, while acknowledging to Fox News that it could have been a different year.
> "Yes, it could have been another year. So what? She was a teenager when I ran for office. It doesn't make it okay," she wrote to Fox News. "It happened when I was running for office against him. If it was 2007, that makes it even worse."

NEW: Fox has obtained a letter from former VP of the First State Gridiron Dinner saying @JoeBiden did not attend the event on May 3, 2008. I have also obtained Biden's personal schedule for the day, which shows that an aide went in his place.
Biden had a minor surgery that week.

The truth is: Conservatives have manipulated the media into prioritizing "balance" over empirical reality.

Therefore, they're thirsty to cover a Biden-scandal each time they report on 1 of Trump's myriad, grave failings.

They did it w/ emails in 2016 & they've learned nothing.

This is why it matters, for short term political purposes (veepstakes included), that the "re-open" protests have been very unpopular. Local GOPs have hitched their wagons to a movement that is far less popular than the governors.

What people have lost sight of is some protests garner mass support, some protests create more opposition to the position of the protesters. A protest where people's own actions could spread the virus to healthy bystanders seems tailor made for the latter.

I'm going to break through the media game being played here. Personnel records aren't often in a Senator's papers; everyone knows this. But the media is a partisan in wanting the UD files because they want the fodder of 30 years of senate gossip for clicks.

So we get a clickbait headline of "headaches" for campaigns. But just remember how the media, including Politico handled emails stolen by a foreign country - breathless coverage, almost always out of context, covering gossip instead of facts or policy. They want to do it again.

I do think there is an important discussion around the issue of asymmetry and gotcha journalism. Because when one party stonewalls and the media accountability is gotcha journalism, transparency for one party only seems like a little bit like dunking on yourself.

This @AP headline is incredibly misleading. Whether or not Tara Reade used the word "harassment" in her alleged complaint, what she describes here fits the legal definition of harassment. This was 1993; "harassment" had barely just entered the lexicon.

Respectfully, there was a full discussion of sexual harassment in 1991 from the Clarence Thomas hearings. It clearly had entered the lexicon.

So we have moved from from "the media is partisan and wants to mine Biden's records for clicks" to wanting a different headline on a Marc Caputo story. Nice.

Your words: "the media is a partisan in wanting the UD files because they want the fodder of 30 years of senate gossip for clicks."

On a story like this clicks are nothing, reputation and liability are everything. I work at HuffPost. We know how clicks work.

The vital point in this story, is that for all the focus on Trump's briefings, he's really not doing much of anything to fight the virus -- not coordinating testing, not organizing PPE... just leaving it up to the states. Laissez-faire government in a pandemic is a disaster.

It sounds like you don't have a problem with the structure of real MFA, just its popularity (sky high btw). In that case, your time would be better spent trying to convince people that they won't lose coverage with MFA, which they won't. Of course you are paid to do the opposite.

I agree with Neera in the sense that the Germans haven't done anything bad in the past 100 years and therefore they are most likely correct here. Not looking into it any further.

The specifics of what Reade filed have no bearing on your assertion about the unlikelihood of the Biden Papers containing relevant material. Perhaps Biden's staff processed his papers differently than Hart/Glenn. Perhaps not. The point is, we don't know w/o access to them.

Reade is claiming--& I find her overall story quite unlikely--that she filed a complaint alleging she was made to feel uncomfortable in some way & experienced retaliation. Along w/any 92-3 staff memos discussing her, the Q would be whether that complaint exists in the papers.

Nice piece by @paulwaldman1 on how the demand for Biden's papers is well on its way to becoming the "But her emails" of 2020:

@JoeBiden and his campaign should sue MSNBC, ABC, FOX and the Intercept for libel. We can't play around this time hoping the media will get right. I also believe Chris Hayes, Mika, Ryan Grim, Halper, and Sasha Pezenik should be specifically named in the suit.

Perhaps the White House should find a different staff lead for the coronavirus task force than Marc Short, who did not believe the death toll would ever get to 60,000.

Marc Short, chief of staff to Vice President Pence, exerted significant influence over the coronavirus task force, setting the agenda and determining seating arrangements for meetings as well as helping to orchestrate press briefings. Short also is one of the White House's most vocal skeptics of how bad the pandemic would be. He repeatedly questioned the data being shared with Trump, and in internal discussions said he did not believe the death toll would ever get to 60,000 and that the administration was overreacting, damaging the economy and the president's chances for reelection, according to people who have heard his arguments.

For Democrats who worry that this situation is a means by which the hard left can relitigate a primary in which their preferred candidate lost, and thereby supplant the will of the voters, a Bruenig column like this is not going to be reassuring.

Mark R. Yzaguirre @markyzaguirre
Not sure why the Democratic Party should be taking planning suggestions from someone who hates the Party and won't vote for Joe Biden in any circumstance, but hey, it gave Liz Bruenig something to write about.

Per the same model, if Americans perceive full reopening as a "return to normal" and, as a result, relax their own social distancing practices, cumulative national deaths could reach 950,000 by June 30.

950,000 deaths in the next two months.

Please consider supporting a single payer healthcare plan. It's transparent to everyone that the main argument against it is that enormous companies can't siphon wealth from sick people. More people die of for-profit healthcare every year than the coronavirus in the US.

Having checked with multiple people who've closed congressional offices, the practice is not to send personnel records to public repositories like universities, presumably because of privacy concerns. The 2008 guidance says nothing about personnel records.

Hi Neera, we are well into history nerd territory now. In 2008, the House passed H. Concur. Res. 307, that specifically declared that each member "should take all necessary measures" to ensure that members papers are "properly maintained" which would auger against destruction.

Want to say something here: what is happening to Biden re: Del. records is same that happened to Hillary re: emails. Why are we doing this again? Biden WAS investigated in 2008 -- lawyers found nothing. Obama would not have put up with any HINT of any like this. 1/

I'm going to break through the media game being played here. Personnel records aren't often in a Senator's papers; everyone knows this. But the media is a partisan in wanting the UD files because they want the fodder of 30 years of senate gossip for clicks.

So we get a clickbait headline of "headaches" for campaigns. But just remember how the media, including Politico handled emails stolen by a foreign country - breathless coverage, almost always out of context, covering gossip instead of facts or policy. They want to do it again.

Neera Tanden ✓ @neeratanden · May 2

That's why they put on their rose colored glasses and tell us that when Mitch McConnell demands the U of Delaware files, he's really just a transparency advocate.

Not sure if people are aware, but PPE isn't the only healthcare resource we're struggling to find. Disinfecting wipe supplies are increasingly strained & they are a necessity. I'm also starting to hear worry about laryngoscope blades. We need to address healthcare supply chains.

FEMA now projects 200,000 new coronavirus cases a day by the end of the month (it's now about 25,000 new cases a day), and by June 1, about 3,000 deaths daily from Covid-19. Trump ■ making BS excuses for suppressing those awful numbers while he urges people to go back to work.

NYT article written by two epidemiologists shows had fat-ass acted just two weeks earlier, death toll would've been just 6,000 cases. Fat-ass is responsible for every death over that and that is what is important. 70,000 is a failure and it will only get worse.

Andy Slavitt @ @ASlavitt · May 4

In my estimation something the president gets wrong is the public's tolerance for bad news. Bad news served up straight. Hope and plans are good but only when they are rooted in reality. 60k was another version of "gone by April" or "15 going to zero." 8/

Multiple former Senate staffers have said personnel records are destroyed, not kept with records like these. There must be investigation but why should records irrelevant to Reade's claim be searched when Trump won't answer sworn allegations in court, turnover his DNA or taxes?

Janet Johnson @JJohnsonLaw · May 4
Why must there be investigations? She filed a police report and apparently didn't name Joe Biden (fear she was filing a false police report and committing a crime?). The case was closed. The police are an investigative body and they closed the case. Why shouldn't we?

This is why only testing people with symptoms is dumb.

It's dumb in food plants, in nursing homes, anywhere you actually need to detect all infections.

This is perhaps interesting. You can do a pretty good job of predicting recent R in each state based on Apple's mobility data and urbanization. No surprise, but cases are falling more where people are moving around less.

But controlling for mobility, they're also falling more in rural states than urban ones. Montana isn't having many COVID-19 cases even though mobility is high there, for instance.

We also got a later start, which helps explain the lower overall numbers. The question is whether we can bend the arc sooner than they did.

The latest reported Trump admin projections suggest that may not be happening anytime soon.

Folks need to understand that the GOP believes, as a foundational principle, that labor is expendable and that the lives of workers are meaningless if not in service to owners and investors. It's neo-feudalism doing capitalism cosplay.

Whoever said that was wrong. I wont defend that line of thinking. My point is that OF COURSE Biden would win amongst conservative voters. Because he's conservative. But he's less likely to win those states in a general because they're conservative. Tbf, Bernie wouldnt win either

For Democrats who worry that this situation is a means by which the hard left can relitigate a primary in which their preferred candidate lost, and thereby supplant the will of the voters, a Bruenig column like this is not going to be reassuring.

Not sure why the Democratic Party should be taking planning suggestions from someone who hates the Party and won't vote for Joe Biden in any circumstance, but hey, it gave Liz Bruenig something to write about.

Trump didn't linger on the topic of death when Karen Whitsett, a state representative from Michigan, mentioned that she had "lost several family members" to COVID-19.

Texas law says you can request a mail-in ballot if you have a physical condition that could cause injury by voting in person. Texas voters have a qualifying "physical condition" - lack of immunity to a widespread deadly virus. We should all vote by mail.

I think many people, myself included, could read your two tweets together - of mine and this other person's - and then saying "good company" as conflating the two tweets. But perhaps you only meant to say you're in good company with Chris Hayes.

It's difficult to be in NYC, which has honestly felt like the apocalypse, with the city silent except constant sirens and dead bodies piling up outside of funeral homes because they didn't have any room, to now watch the rest of the country not learn a single thing from us.

We are finally having a slight relief from our nightmare. And honestly I cannot imagine for one second why there is so much complacency that what happened here won't happen to you. It will.

You just need to stay home. This has be an awful time that you do not want to experience.

Erin Biba @erinbiba · May 3

There has been way, way too much coverage of the naysayers and not nearly enough coverage of the deaths, the dead, the suffering, and the harsh reality of this situation.

299 people died in NY yesterday. THAT IS STILL A LOT OF PEOPLE.

Erin Biba @erinbiba · May 3

My friend asked me if I'm prepared to stay inside for a year (until the vaccine). I don't think the need to measure time is emotionally healthy. I'm not counting days anymore.

KS was all by mail.
KS Dem party mailed all registered voters a ballot.
Bernie was still on the ballot as an option along with Warren and Tulsi.
It was ranked choice; so anybody who voted for someone not over 15% it went to the next choice. (Warren/Tulsi not over 15%)
Biden won

It was always farcical - two months ago - that people would "get back to normal" because the President and a comparative handful of clowns called for it.

People simply won't do it until they feel comfortable they aren't taking credible risks to themselves OR THEIR FAMILIES.

I have a lot of anxiety about this virus, I'm in a higher risk group so am worried I wouldn't survive, plus the horror stories of how people are dying. It's an impossibly high bar - is a company's product worth risking your life and facing your most basic of fears?

Adjusting for testing volume, you likely get ■ slight overall decline outside of NYC. That's not great, because (i) it's only a slight decline; (ii) some areas are likely increasing; (iii) social distancing is relaxing. Still, that's a much more complete and accurate story.

A lot of this news coverage winds up punishing states for doing more testing, because if you do more testing, you find more cases and therefore get worse headlines. So it's not just bad reporting; it creates poor incentives since we need more tests.

As @DKThomp points out, there's no magic to getting Covid-19 under control: just hard work (and a little luck). We can do what South Korea has done. Trump just doesn't want to try. He'd rather blame blue state governors instead. theatlantic.com/ideas/archive/ …

> In the time that South Korea righted its course, the United States veered into disaster. In mid-March, the U.S. and South Korea had the same number of coronavirus-caused fatalities—approximately 90. In April, South Korea lost a total of 85 souls to COVID-19, while the U.S. lost 62,000—an average of 85 deaths every hour. That the U.S. population is approximately six times larger than South Korea's does little to soften the horror of the comparison.
> Juxtaposing the South Korean response with the American tragedy, some commentators have chalked up the difference to an ancient culture of docile collectivism and Confucianism across the Pacific. This observation isn't just racist. It also exoticizes South Korea's success and makes it seem like the inevitable result of millennia of cultural accretion, rather than something the U.S., or any other country, can learn from right now. The truth ▮ that the Korean government and its citizens did something simple, admirable, and all too rare: They suffered from history, and they learned from it.

With infectious disease intrahousehold is always a problem. Why isolation to a hotel room is a good idea. Remember the cruise ship passengers from the Grand Princess. Positive cases stayed in isolation with social support until they were well. Old Public Health method at work.

And likely 50% could have been avoided with a rational response rather than the total incompetence we've all seen.

Biden's lead is growing. My hope is that Trump will continue to overreact to the polls and see the need for increasingly "assertive" action to stop his slide, which action will actually have the effect of accelerating this slide. That's my hope and I'm sticking to it.

BREAKING: Michigan is the first state to establish low incidence as the key threshold. This is the first state explicitly aiming to contain the virus. content.govdelivery.com/attachments/MI …

All other states are using a decline in either hospitalizations or new cases as the key threshold. Here we explain why this is insufficient >> americanprogress.org/issues/healthc…

> Some experts have recommended that states can safely reopen if there is a sustained decline in positive cases over 14 days. But the epidemic curve is asymmetric: The downward slope from the peak is much more gradual than was the upward slope to the peak, resembling more of a plateau. This means that widespread, uncontrollable transmission will likely remain even 14 days after the peak.
> For this reason, the absolute level of incidence—not just the trend—is critically important. Simply put, incidence needs to be low enough that a strategy of testing, contact tracing, and isolation can suppress any outbreak. When there is widespread transmission, this strategy is not feasible. Moreover, if widespread transmission remains, the public will not have confidence in engaging with the economy—regardless of whether it is legally allowed.

Your response is either shallow, or dishonest.

"big fan of McHugh/Farrow's work" as in the #MeToo movement... The case he worked was literally at the center of it.

Or were you against women revealing their stories of sexual assault so the world could understand its prevalence?

True. Also, as I suspect you'll agree, if the government is going tell people to socially distance then the gov't should be ensuring people can pay their bills while doing it. Many other developed countries have matched all or part of payrolls (Canada, UK, etc.) We should too.

Some crucial points

When we spoke a year ago, Reade told me the only named sources she could give me were her deceased mother and the friend I spoke to. A recently uncovered tape of her mom on Larry King Live appears to corroborate Reade's claim that she was struggling in Biden's office in 1993, but does not include an assault allegation. When I reconnected with the friend I spoke to last year, who had previously told me Biden had not assaulted Reade, she told me a version of the

If I were an old friend of Reade's and she told me this same story privately over the course of a year, I doubt I would question her account. The brain processes traumatic experiences differently, making it difficult for some survivors to share them as a linear narrative. And the personal nature of a sexual assault can saddle victims with feelings of shame and doubt. It's not easy to talk about. Many sexual assault survivors never speak of the experience at all.

But I'm not an old friend. I'm a journalist. Reade came to me because she wanted to share her story with the world, not just with me. It was

The headline of this piece notes that one of Tara Reade's lawyers is a large Trump donor. But this later tidbit seems more relevant still: apnews.com/10d2842623b2c2 …

> Over the weekend, another attorney, William Moran, told the AP he was working with Reade.
> Moran, who works at a law firm in Columbia, Maryland, previously wrote and edited for Sputnik, a news agency founded and supported by the Russian state-owned media company Rossiya Segodnya. A January 2017 report released by the Office of the Director of National Intelligence on Russia's interference in the 2016 campaign said Sputnik was part of "Russia's state-run propaganda machine," which "contributed to the influence campaign by serving as a platform for Kremlin messaging to Russian and international audiences."

Having a national plan to test, contact trace and isolate early on so we never had to shut down. South Korea, Taiwan and Singapore never shut down Germany will weather this better because they had a national strategy after their outbreak. And now they've contained it.

I'm not saying there's not a tension between those two things. I'm saying once learned, it's not going to be unlearned. Democracies can negotiate ways to counterbalance those risks. China (and others) will not stop using that technological innovation.

I agree, wholeheartedly. And, in theory, our political institutions are capable of striking that balance. That's not a balance China thinks or cares about. I was making a more general observation: once an innovation exists, it doesn't go away.

So being 2 months into a pandemic outbreak and STILL not having enough testing to determine where the virus isn't is really not great. In fact it's bad.

> Neera Tanden @neeratanden

Full Fauci email message to me:

The major message that I wish to convey to the Senate HLP committee tomorrow is the danger of trying to open the country prematurely. If we skip over the checkpoints in the guidelines to: "Open America Again", then we risk the danger of multiple outbreaks throughout the country. This will not only result in needless suffering and death, but would actually set us back on our quest to return to normal.

For the record, it is true that the trends in the DMV are worse than the national average right now for reasons that I don't think anyone has done a convincing job of explaining. It's not just the White House staff getting sick by coincidence.

One of the funny things abt Greenwald applauding Chuck Ross is that the Roger Stone warrants prove Ross perpetuated Stone's lies AND got him subpoenaed in the process.

Yes, China could have prevented this. I hope you join Republicans in demanding accountability from China. We thankfully still have a lower per capita death rate than the U.K., Italy, France, Spain, Sweden, Belgium, Netherlands, Ireland and more. All government run healthcare.

I think could have had far fewer deaths if we'd acted sooner, and Trump continues to lead extraordinarily poorly. But it seems like a lot of the criticism on the raw numbers ignores the fact that the US is the third most populous country in the world.

If everyone is tested, the sick and asymptomatic positives could be quarantined. Then test everyone again and do the same. After 4 tests and less than one month, we would be clear of the virus and could open up fully. Conald has failed miserably.

In DC, Columbia Heights and the 16th St. corridor are the epicenter. This kind of granular heat map, which South Korea does, is useful - and will be more so if/when there are much fewer cases.

But first, Bowser says the city will start releasing COVID-19 data by neighborhood. It was already doing so by ward, but this is even more granular. Highest positive cases: Columbia Heights, 16th Street Heights, Chinatown, Brightwood.

The Death Star seems to be misfiring.
vanityfair.com/news/2020/05/t …

> Trump and campaign manager Brad Parscale's relationship has been fraying for weeks, sources said. Trump was said to be annoyed last month about a largely positive profile of Parscale in the New York Times Magazine. Trump had already been irked by Parscale because of the talk that Parscale, a former website designer from San Antonio, had made millions of dollars through his companies from Trump's campaigns and bought a Ferrari. "The money is the biggest issue for Trump," a former West Wing official said. A few days before the Times Magazine piece was published, Trump called Parscale and reportedly threatened to sue him for the campaign's weak poll numbers. According to a source briefed on the widely reported call, Parscale told Trump to blame the campaign's struggle on Kushner. "Brad said, 'Blame the people Jared brought in,'" the source said. (Parscale did not respond to a request for comment.)

Rich McHugh, Ronan's investigative producer who was central to exposing Harvey Weinstein, worked as a producer for Fox 18 years ago (!) for 2 years. Now you're trying to discredit Reade by calling him a "former Fox News producer?"

I think it's odd that 3 networks offer a sit down interview and two are canceled and one never agreed to but McHugh books an Instagram interview in which facts like the Vox story - with the inconsistent stories by the corroborator- never come up. Of course Instagram can't be sued

These views aren't particularly common or popular among Trump voters, though. Only among perhaps half of Trump voters or fewer. That is, these positions (strongly anti-distancing or anti-masks) split the Republican base while aligning everyone else against Trump.

As I wrote earlier, most of the steps experts are urging would help Trump's re-election prospects. They're fairly popular unto themselves (for now). And they'll give us a fighting chance of returning closer to normal by November with fewer fatalities along the way.

The problem ■ these steps require (i) patience and (ii) willingness to listen to experts, things in short supply in the WH. Trump's political instincts are overrated in general but are ■ terrible match for this crisis.

As I wrote earlier, most of the steps experts are urging would help Trump's re-election prospects. They're fairly popular unto themselves (for now). And they'll give us a fighting chance of returning closer to normal by November with fewer fatalities along the way.

The problem is these steps require (i) patience and (ii) willingness to listen to experts, things in short supply in the WH. Trump's political instincts are overrated in general but are a terrible match for this crisis.

If someone polled the question of who would Americans rather have in the pandemic, Obama or Trump, I'm pretty confident about who would get a solid majority of the vote (again).

> Bill Kristol @BillKristol

We are told Republicans are political geniuses yet two of their most unpopular politicians - McConnell and Trump -are launching attacks on one of the most popular political figure in the country, if not the most - Obama. Keep at it geniuses.

DJ Judd @DJJudd
Tonight's Team Trump Livestream features Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell who, talking COVID-19, tells Lara Trump, "clearly the Obama administration did not leave to this administration, any kind of game plan for something like this."

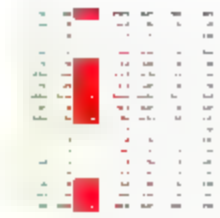
I'm truly surprised @NateSilver538 is not taking into account timing and testing. A country that contained the virus or only had a small outbreak can rely on community testing to contain the virus. If you have the largest outbreak in the world, you need a LOT more testing.



Nate Silver ✓ @NateSilver538
We have tested roughly the same number of people per capita (within +/- 25%) as South Korea, Germany, Australia, Singapore, Canada, the UK, Hong Kong and France. Some are a little higher and some are a little

Essentially you have to test anyone who may be sick And test randomly to get a handle on where the virus is and is not. And we are not able to do that yet.

Yeah, given what's happened with the curve in Australia vs. the U.S. (just to take an example), there are differences in what's required now. This all does have to do w/ early intervention.

Many public officials need their salaries because they didn't inherit a fortune from their dad and they're not pilfering huge sums of public money directly into various luxury resorts they own.

This is why our situation is so devastating. The lockdown was to buy time to create the real solution. But that didn't happen. So we get the worst of both worlds: Economic disaster and mass disease and death.

> Mike Duncan ✓ @mikeduncan

To hear some leftists tell it, no president before Obama has ever used drones. He just woke up one day and thought it would be fun. They also don't do a great job, imo, of articulating what either doing nothing or sending in ground troops would look like.

Yes, the Majority Leader called the former President "classless," stating he should "keep his mouth shut" about a sitting President who is constantly attacking, insulting, & blaming his predecessor for his own administration's gross incompetence & malfeasance.

Now that's classy.

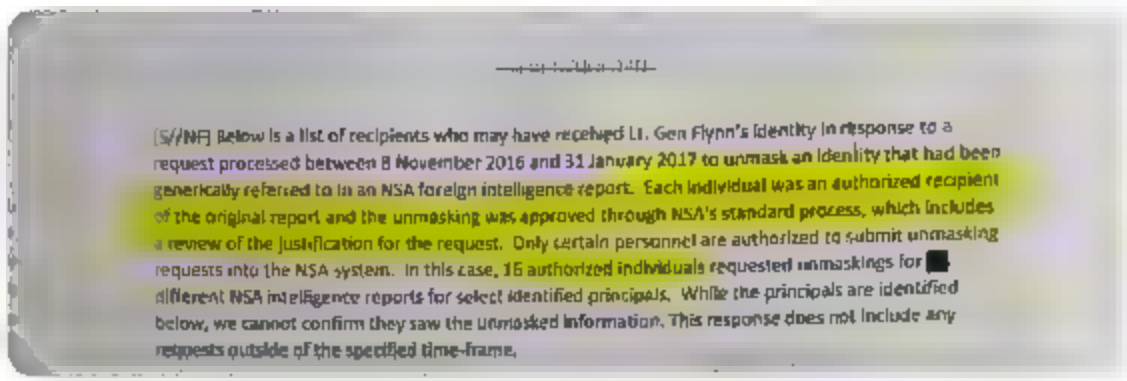
It also lays out at the very beginning that this was all standard and authorized.



[S//NF] Below is a list of recipients who may have received Lt. Gen Flynn's identity in response to a request processed between 8 November 2016 and 31 January 2017 to unmask an identity that had been generically referred to in an NSA foreign intelligence report. Each individual was an authorized recipient of the original report and the unmasking was approved through NSA's standard process, which includes a review of the justification for the request. Only certain personnel are authorized to submit unmasking requests into the NSA system. In this case, 16 authorized individuals requested unmaskings for [redacted] different NSA intelligence reports for select identified principals. While the principals are identified below, we cannot confirm they saw the unmasked information. This response does not include any requests outside of the specified time-frame.

Under US surveillance rules, unmasking an American's identity in a report derived from foreign-intelligence surveillance is routine when necessary to understand (e.g., who was the Russian ambassador talking to?). The NSA did so 10,000 times last year, nearly 17,000 times in 2018.

> When writing surveillance-based reports for broader dissemination within the intelligence community, analysts are supposed to "minimize" any privacy intrusion into Americans. Generally, this requires them to "mask" any names and private information about Americans. For example, ■ report citing Ivan's phone call with Joe might recount what Ivan said to "U.S. Person 1," rather than using Joe's name and remarks.
> When might an American's name be unmasked in a report?
> Minimization rules make an exception to the masking requirement if the American's words and identity are necessary to understand foreign intelligence. This exception would seem to cover keeping Mr. Flynn's identity and words unmasked in disseminated materials about his conversation with Mr. Kislyak.

Worth remembering that when President Roosevelt established the Civil Works Administration the program was fully functional in about two months, employing over 4 million employees and reaching 8% of the labor force.

Also worth remembering the union busting that went on. Everything good that happened happened in the name of preserving capitalism, not improving it or the lives of its citizens.

Kasey Klimes @KaseyKlimes · May 10

Simply not true. FDR established the NLRB, requiring management to bargain with unions and making union election results legally binding. His administration reversed the decline of union membership, and did so very intentionally.

The WPA was better... and I'm a proponent of something similar. People get jobs, get paid, have something to be proud of, and our crumbling infrastructure gets very-badly-needed fixing.

There is nothing new about Republicans weaponizing national security in order to throw an election their way.

They've done this since Nixon ran in 1968.

What's also not new unfortunately is how so many in the media will hype up this "unmasking."

Wonder why William Barr's DOJ is willing to go after Republican Senator Richard Burr? Reason: Burr's committee is due to release the final installment of their 5-part report on Russian interference in 2016. The focus: counterintelligence findings. https://www.burr.senate.gov/press/releases/senate-intel-releases-new-report-on-intel-community-assessment-of-russian-interference …

"Unmasking" sounds vaguely sinister but it means intel agents flagged Flynn's suspicious contacts with Russia - which Flynn would later lie to the VP and FBI about, for some reason - and officials found out who he was, with proper approvals and through authorized channels.

It doesn't mean that.

It is virtually impossible that any of these are the FBI unmasking Flynn's ID on between December 31 and January 4, bc none of them show that.

Which in turn means all of these may be unsuspicious.

We need a fact check or context on this number. 12,500 may have died of H1N1 directly, but it was part of the normal flu mix that year and crowded out other flu deaths

This paper says excess mortality from H1N1 was 2,634

A good many of us knew exactly what was underlying and have been struggling to alleviate it for literally years.

Others have been blind to it because of their self-absorption or willful ignorance.

Because it's their awareness of the trade. If it was in a blind trust, as Loeffler and Feinstein claim, then presumably the custodian is not aware of the information and doesn't trade on the basis of it.

This is a preview of the BS to come in this election. This is coordinated desperation, but they are ruthless and we better remember that and smack this down with a fierceness unlike anything they have seen. We are not going to put up with this again.

And the nearly 20% of moms who can't feed their kids is THREE TIMES the level we saw during the great recession in 2008. There is no moral, logical or rational cover for failing to expand SNAP now.

.@KBeds says Trump's comments below are "saying the quiet part out loud"

"With his statement today, Trump has once again demonstrated that he is more concerned with his poll numbers & his reelection than he is with safeguarding American lives & delivering real economic recovery" twitter.com/sahilkapur/sta …

Bedingfield released the following statement:

"Once again, President Trump is saying the quiet part out loud. "When you test, you have a case. When you test, you find something is wrong with people. If we didn't do any testing we would have very few cases." Trump has failed the American people throughout his response to this crisis, and now, instead of finally doing what's right, he would rather cover it all up.

"With his statement today, President Trump has once again demonstrated that he is more concerned with his poll numbers and his reelection than he is with safeguarding American lives and delivering real economic recovery — both of which every expert tells us can only happen with adequate testing capacity to track and stop this disease.

"More than 85,000 Americans have lost their lives after he failed to act on this crisis. Just today we learned that the total number of Americans that have filed for unemployment has grown to 36.5 million — the worst job loss our country has suffered since the Great Depression. That's on his watch.

"Vice President Biden has repeatedly called for President Trump to stand up a Pandemic Testing Board, like FDR's War Production Board, to massively scale up the production and allocation of equipment and supplies we need. This should happen today.

"Every new delay from this administration will lead to even more unnecessary deaths of Americans, and even more families thrown into financial catastrophe. President Trump

Burr apparently made the trades himself, Loeffler & Feinstein through third parties...

Also, am sure it has to do with how much cooperation they're getting.

Why does it matter who makes the trade? It's the intent of the trade. Otherwise rich people would simply work thru third parties to lower their chance of prosecution.

There is an important debate about how the media should cover misinformation, and I don't want to minimize that.

But I think some people ignore that this stuff would spread like a virus without ever appearing in NYT, WaPo or others who apply skepticism in their coverage.

Yes they should be covered - the media should determine if they are true or not and if not say so. And NOT cover this bs as a political story. That only helps propel Trump's lying.

To the degree there's a design behind "Obamagate" it's this: To reinforce the claim that Russian interference in 2016 was a hoax. So when there are reports of Russia interfering this fall Trump can dismiss them as a hoax. So Russia can successfully interfere in the 2020 election.

There seems to be nothing at all to #Obamagate. But there was one thing the Obama Administration did in late 2016 that really was inappropriate and damaging to the democratic process: Comey announcing the reopening of the Clinton e-mail investigation ten days before Election Day.

I'm truly surprised @NateSilver538 is not taking into account timing and testing. A country that contained the virus or only had a small outbreak can rely on community testing to contain the virus. If you have the largest outbreak in the world, you need a LOT more testing.

Nate Silver @NateSilver538

We have tested roughly the same number of people per capita (within +/- 25%) as South Korea, Germany, Australia, Singapore, Canada, the UK, Hong Kong and France. Some are a little higher and some are a little

NEW: Over the past decade, Tara Reade has left a trail of aggrieved acquaintances in California's Central Coast who say they remember 2 things about her — she spoke favorably about her time working for Biden, and she left them feeling duped.
